Refugee Journey: Syria
Refugee Journey Guide

An educational activity about life as a Syrian refugee for youth and adults (age 12+)

Prepare
You will need:

- Copies of the graphics (optional: enlarge and mount)
- Bible verses on page 2 printed as a handout
- Copies of “backpack” cards located on page 9 and 10 of this book. Print enough for your group – be sure to have some of each color. If printing in black and white, use markers or crayons to indicate color.
- Chairs, easels, or wall space to set up the graphics at stations

Print each of the graphics included in this packet on one sheet of paper each. You may want to enlarge the graphics if you are able, or you might want to mount them on poster board to give them some stability for hanging or propping up.

Create a space to gather and begin. It may be a table, a grouping of chairs, or, if possible, a tent. This will be the “refugee camp” where participants will learn about the Syrian refugee crisis and begin their journey.

Using the graphics, create stations around the room. Most stations will have only one graphic, but note that there are some that have 2 or more. Graphics can be placed on tables, taped to chairs, or hung on walls. Be sure the graphics remain in order. Optional: use tape (gaffers tape or painters tape works best and will not leave residue) on the floor to mark the path from one station to the next.

Gather
Welcome your refugees to the refugee camp. You will begin with a Bible study about welcoming the stranger. Start by reading the Bible verses. You may choose to print them and cut them into strips so individuals can read them, or you may print a sheet of all the verses for each person. Have volunteers read each Bible verse. Once all verses have been read, discuss the questions at the side of the page. If you have time and want to dig deeper, read and discuss the additional Bible verses offered on the following pages. In addition, explore the resources offered on www.globalministries.org/refugeejourney.
Welcoming the Stranger: What Does the Bible Say?

Leviticus 19:33-34
When an alien resides with you in your land, you shall not oppress the alien. The alien who resides with you shall be to you as the citizen among you; you shall love the alien as yourself; for you were aliens in the land of Egypt: I am the Lord your God.

Matthew 2: 13-15a
An angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream and said, “Get up, take the child and his mother, and flee to Egypt, and remain there until I tell you: for Herod is about to search for the child to destroy him. Then Joseph got up, took the child and his mother by night, and went to Egypt, and remained there until the death of Herod.”

Matthew 25: 34-37a, 40
Then this king will say to those at his right hand, “Come, you that are blessed by my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you welcomed me, I was naked and you gave me clothing, I was sick and you took care of me, I was in prison and you visited me.” Then the righteous will answer him, “Lord, when ...?” And the king will answer them, “Truly I tell you, just as you did it to one of the least of these who are members of my family, you did it to me.”

Hebrews 13:2
Do not neglect to show hospitality to strangers, for by doing that some have entertained angels without knowing it.

Consider these Questions:
1. What are some of the central messages conveyed in these scriptures?
2. How does God view strangers? How does God expect us to treat strangers and aliens?
3. Why did Joseph take Mary and their child, Jesus, into Egypt? How important was it for them to have a place such as Egypt to go to?
4. Who in the Bible was a refugee? What were they running from? How were they received in the countries to which they fled? How were their circumstances similar to or different from those of modern refugees?
5. Jesus identifies with those in need. How are we to respond?
6. How do these scriptures relate to church involvement in refugee ministries?

Refugees and the Syrian Crisis

Background
The crisis in Syria dates back to the early days of 2011, when peaceful protesters expressed their hopes for political and economic reforms, in the spirit of the so-called Arab Spring that was sweeping the Middle East and North Africa. The situation became violent within a few months. Since then, more than 500,000 Syrians have been killed, half of the Syrian population has been forced from their homes — either displaced internally or as refugees in neighboring countries, Europe and beyond — and hopes for a resolution of the conflict remain dim.

The Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) and United Church of Christ have been involved in response to the crisis since the beginning of the conflict, and continue to be involved. Our response includes prayers and education, advocacy for an end to violence and a responsible US role, and support for the work of partners in the Middle East who continue to provide humanitarian aid to those in need.

Setup
Have the info posters printed out and either hung in the room near your gathering place, or placed on the tables. Ask volunteers to read each one aloud. It may help to physically move from poster to poster, especially if you have young people in your group.

1. Refugee

Ask a volunteer to read the definition from the poster.

Words to Share
It is important to note that in order to be given refugee status a displaced person has to go through the Refugee Status Determination (RSD) process, which is conducted by the government of the country of asylum or the United Nations High Commissioner on Refugees (UNHCR). Refugees are entitled to basic protections under the United Nations 1951 Refugee Convention and other international agreements. By law, refugees cannot be sent back to countries where their lives would be in danger.

Discuss
If refugees cannot be sent back, where should they go?
Why should refugees be treated differently than other kinds of migrants?

2. Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs)

Ask a volunteer to read the definition.

Emphasize that IDPs differ from refugees in that they are displaced within the borders of their country while refugees have fled their country. IDPs have not crossed an international border. While they may have fled for similar reasons as refugees, IDPs stay within their own country and remain under the protection of its government, even if that government is the reason for their displacement. As a result, these people are among the most vulnerable in the world.

Discuss
Can you think of any examples of Internally Displaced People, past or present?

3. Migrant

Ask a volunteer to read the definition.

Words to Share
Countries are free to deport migrants who arrive without legal papers, which they cannot do with refugees under the 1951 convention. Migrants are particularly vulnerable to human rights abuses like terrible working conditions, abuse, forced labor, and trafficking.

Discuss
How do you understand the difference between migrants and refugees?

4 Refugee Stats
Ask a volunteer to read the statistics.

Discuss
Do these numbers surprise you? Why or why not?

The Syrian Crisis
Consider sharing some of the video resources on www.globalministries.org/refugeejourney to help understand how the crisis began.

Words to Share
Violence has occurred throughout Syria. Due to limited travel options, many refugees are likely to travel to the country closest to the place they are fleeing. Bordering on northern Syria, Turkey hosts the largest number of Syrian refugees at 3.6 million as of Sept 2020. Take a look at the country of Lebanon on the map and notice it’s size relative to nearby countries. Note Lebanon’s population compared to the Syrian refugee population. One out of every 7 people in Lebanon is a Syrian refugee. The almost 1 million Syrian refugees in Lebanon (plus thousands more not registered) are in addition to refugees from other conflicts (Palestinian and some Iraqi) already living in Lebanon.

In comparison, as of December 2019, the U.S. (population 328 million) has accepted almost 25,000 Syrian refugees since the crisis began in 2011. Syrian refugees accounted for less than 1% of refugees admitted into the U.S. in 2019.

As you consider these numbers, keep in mind that it is estimated that 50% of Syrian refugees are children. Half the children of Syria are not attending school. Refugee children are susceptible to disease due to poor sanitation and cold weather. Many refugee children have to work to support their families. Children are more vulnerable to sexual abuse and exploitation in unfamiliar and overcrowded camps.

Discuss
What do you notice about the numbers of refugees compared to population in the countries surrounding Syria?

Where would you go if you had to flee your home state? How would you get there?

After reflecting on the Bible verses, what are your thoughts about the numbers of Syrian refugees accepted into the US?

6 Desperate Choices
Consider sharing some of the video resources on www.globalministries.org/refugeejourney.

Discuss
What would you do if you were a Syrian?

7 Life in a Refugee Camp
Many of us imagine refugee camps as tent cities, but in reality most refugees live in cities under very poor conditions. Refugees often do not have the right to work and children are not permitted to attend schools in the host country. Refugees flee with whatever they can carry and lack basic provisions. In the camps, water and food are rationed, makeshift schools are overcrowded, and medical aid is inadequate.
Discuss
What do you think refugees do as they wait in refugee camps? What would you do if you had to wait in a refugee camp?

It’s now time for us to leave the refugee camp and begin our journey.

Many refugees travel with smart phones so that they can learn from others making the same journey about weather, best routes, and border control. Also, many refugees bring with them their diplomas and certifications as Syrian refugees are often well-educated professionals.

Journey Station
Leader reads the instructions and participants take backpack cards and fill them out. It may be helpful to have a small table here for backpack cards, pens, and a space for participants to write.

As participants think of what to bring, remind them that the items need to fit in a backpack or be carried. Their family will be traveling with them and does not need to be included on the list. You may want to point out that pets are a liability and that if you bring a pet, you will need to bring food and water as your other items, limiting what you can bring for you and your family to survive. Additionally, as a refugee it is almost impossible to cross a border with an animal.

Once all participants have their backpack cards filled in, move to Journey Station 2.

The following pages should be printed and used in conjunction with the booklet.
A refugee is someone who has been forced to flee their country because of persecution, war, and violence.

Refugees could be persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, political opinion, or membership in a particular social group. Most likely, they cannot return home or are afraid to do so. War and ethnic, tribal, and religious violence are leading causes of refugees fleeing their countries. Climate change is a growing reason people flee their homes.
Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) are people who have been forced to leave home, but remain somewhere within the borders of their country, hoping to return home when the situation improves.

Most people flee with the barest of essentials and must soon find food, shelter, and clothing to survive. Some move to other towns or cities where they have family or friends with whom they can stay. Many are forced to live on the road, in the open, or under temporary barriers to the elements. Most need humanitarian assistance, but sometimes can’t be reached due to fighting.
Anyone who moves from one country to another is considered a migrant unless they are specifically fleeing war or persecution. Migrants may be fleeing dire poverty, or may be well-off and merely seeking better opportunities, or may be migrating to join relatives who have gone before them.
Refugee Stats

5,562,904 refugees from Syria who have registered with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) as of September 2020.

6,600,000 internally displaced Syrians in need of assistance as of April 19, 2018.

2,980,000 Syrians in hard-to-reach areas as of April 19, 2018.

26,000,000 refugees in the world as of June 19, 2020, the highest number of refugees in history.

79,500,000 forcibly displaced people worldwide as of June 18, 2020, including refugees, internally displaced people (IDPs) and asylum seekers.

5,600,000 Palestinian refugees in the world as of June 18, 2020, the largest refugee population.
Since conflict broke out in 2011 between the Syrian government and opposition groups demanding reforms, over 500,000 Syrians have been killed and more than half of the country’s 23 million people have been uprooted from their homes.

The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees reports that around 5.6 million Syrians have registered as refugees in neighboring countries while 6.6 million are estimated to be internally displaced within Syria. Even those who had previously come to Syria for help, such as Iraqi and Palestinian refugees, have now been forced to seek safety in other countries.

Violence and destruction have left more than half of Syria’s population vulnerable and in need of humanitarian assistance. Homes and infrastructure have been destroyed and basic services have been reduced, making routine life and work impossible. Syria’s developed economy and civil society have been completely disrupted.

People living in Syria face desperate choices:
- remain where they are and risk danger
- flee for areas of the country less marred by violence
- seek refuge in a nearby country that may not welcome them and may prove to be just as violent and unstable

What would you do?
Life in a Refugee Camp

Refugee camps are generally near borders and far from urban areas, which leave refugees isolated and dependent on the goodwill of the host country and humanitarian organizations.

However, not all people who have registered as refugees live in refugee camps. Many actually live in cities, towns, and villages, forcing them to live in poverty due to high costs of living. In the countries bordering Syria, refugees don’t have the right to work and are dependent on the host country government and humanitarian organizations for food, shelter, and other necessities.
Begin your refugee experience here

Grab a backpack card.

Write down 5 things you’d bring with you if you were forced to leave home quickly and didn’t know when you’d be able to return. The 5 things must be able to fit into a backpack.

Go to the next station to see what Syrian refugees experience on their journey to escape war and violence.
Your journey as a refugee starts now

If you have a pink backpack, you have fled from your home to a refugee camp in a neighboring country where you decide to stay until the war is over and you can return home. Your journey ends here, but please feel free to explore the other journeys.

If you have a blue backpack, you have fled from your home, but were unable to take anything with you. Take your list of items and throw it away. You arrive to a refugee camp in a neighboring country where you are lucky enough to be resettled after 3 years of waiting. Please continue on to your final destination, North America. Your journey ends there, but feel free to explore the other journeys.

If you have a purple, yellow, black, or red backpack, you have fled from your home to Turkey where you will attempt to travel to Europe by land and sea. Please continue on to your next destination, Turkey.
There are about 3.6 million Syrian refugees registered in Turkey, but only 10% are living in a refugee camp. Out of desperation for their situation, many refugees from Syria and other countries risk their lives to travel to Europe where they hope to have a better life. Many have family already living there who can help.

The closest Greek island is about 5 miles away from the Turkish coast and the journey can take as little as 1 hour, but can be deadly, particularly in bad weather. In order to cross to Greece, a smuggler will charge approximately $1000 for a spot in an overcrowded, inflatable boat that one of the refugees has to pilot.
#itsnotagame
What color is your backpack?

If you have a purple, yellow, or red backpack, you pay a smuggler and attempt to cross the Aegean Sea to Greece. Your boat manages to make the crossing. Please continue to your next destination, Greece.

If you have a black backpack, you pay a smuggler and attempt to cross the Aegean Sea to Greece, but your boat is too full and capsizes. Everyone on board dies. Your journey ends here, but please feel free to explore the other journeys.
2016 was the deadliest year on record for migrants and refugees trying to cross the Mediterranean Sea to reach Europe with 3,557 deaths recorded. Many boats are overcrowded and capsize before they reach land.

1,159 deaths at sea were recorded in 2019, which equals 3 DEATHS PER DAY
Refugees coming to Greece by boat land on an island beach wet, cold, and hungry. They are greeted by locals or volunteers who help them. They then go to a screening camp where they are asked questions, fingerprinted, registered, and provided with a 72-hour transit pass that allows freedom of movement within Greece. They have the option to claim asylum in Greece, but most want to continue on to other countries in Europe.

Many pay to take the ferry to Athens. In Athens, they pay for a bus or train ticket that will take them to a town near the Greek border. Then, they attempt to walk across the border into North Macedonia in order to continue by land through the countries of the Western Balkans.
#itsnotagame

Greece
What color is your backpack?

If you have a purple or red backpack, you have been able to board a ferry to Athens and travel to the Greek border. Please continue to your next destination, the Western Balkans.

If you have a yellow backpack, you passed through the screening camp successfully and made it to Athens on a ferry. You then decide to buy false documents from a forger so you can fly directly to your final destination. However, at the airport your documents are discovered to be fake and you are arrested and put in a detention facility. You then formally claim asylum in Greece and wait for a decision to be made. Your journey ends here, but please feel free to explore the other journeys.
All along their journey, refugees are exposed to sexual and gender-based violence. In Syria (as in many countries), soldiers and fighters have used rape as a weapon of war. Single women and young girls have been forced to marry in order to have a safe way to escape the violence in Syria. Others are forced to have sex with smugglers or traffickers as a way to pay for their travel or forged documents.

Most refugee welcoming facilities in Europe are not separated by gender, are overcrowded, and do not provide private sanitation and health areas which put women and children, in particular, at risk for violence. At the beginning of this crisis, men had been the majority of refugees fleeing to Europe. Now, more than half are women and children traveling with their families.
Once refugees walk across the border, a bus takes them to a reception facility where they can spend the night, clean up, and eat before continuing on the journey. The next step is to take a train or bus north to get to the next border, where they walk across the border, and take a bus to a reception facility. These steps are repeated in each country until they reach their final destination in Western Europe.

Borders are closing to migrants and refugees. Hungary closed its border with Serbia in September 2015 and built a border fence. Austria restricted the number of refugees who could claim asylum as well as the number of people who could travel through to another country in February 2016. As of March 2016, the borders are closed in North Macedonia, Serbia, Croatia, and Slovenia. In late May 2016, the Greek government began relocating people along its border with North Macedonia to its formal established camps. However, refugees remain on the Greek islands, which are ill-equipped for winter weather. Europe’s largest refugee camp is Moria on the Greek island of Lesbos, which has, at times, housed up to 20,000 people despite being built to house 3,000.

Government and humanitarian officials are concerned about the conditions in camps at closed borders and the rise in smugglers who are paid by refugees to get them into Western Europe, sometimes with deadly consequences.
#itsnotagame
What color is your backpack?

If you have a purple backpack, you manage to make it through the countries of the Western Balkans to your final destination. Please continue to Western Europe.

If you have a red backpack, you get stuck at a border crossing that was just closed. Now you have to wait in an informal camp on the border for the government to decide whether to send you back to a refugee camp in Turkey or resettle you somewhere else. Your journey ends here, but please feel free to explore the other journeys.
Many refugees who decide to travel to Western Europe have family already living there they are trying to reach. Upon arrival to their final destination, refugees can either request asylum or refugee status in that country.

1 million refugees registered in Germany in 2015, and in 2016 the German government received 745,545 asylum applications. Due to this influx, the European Union made an agreement with Turkey that they would resettle more refugees who are in Turkey if the Turkish government would crack down on smugglers and help close the route to Greece, as well as take back refugees from Europe who didn’t meet the resettlement criteria.

The number of migrants and refugees arriving by sea to Greece dropped dramatically after 2016. However, more are trying to cross now from Libya to Italy; a more difficult and dangerous route, although now the EU has an agreement with Libya as well to stem the flow of people crossing the Mediterranean. In 2016, a record number of 3,557 people died crossing the Mediterranean Sea. In 2019, 110,669 people successfully crossed the Mediterranean Sea to Europe while 1,159 people died in the attempt.

Since the beginning of the refugee crisis, there has been a rise of anti-immigrant sentiment in Europe and North America. This has led to the rise of far-right political candidates, protests, demonstrations, and sometimes violence. A number of populist and far-right politicians have been elected to higher office in many countries in Europe and have blamed refugees and migrants for their country’s problems, providing an excuse to limit refugees and migrants.
#itsnotagame
If you have a purple backpack, congratulations! You made it to your final destination, Western Europe! You apply for refugee status and wait for a decision from the host country government.

Remember, though, that you are now in an unfamiliar place with unfamiliar language and customs, and far from friends and extended family.
In the 2016 fiscal year (which ended September 30, 2016), the US resettled 12,486 Syrian refugees, which was more than the committed 10,000. Canada committed to resettling 35,000 Syrian refugees in 2016, and the actually resettled around 40,000. President Obama raised the overall refugee ceiling for fiscal year 2017 (Oct 2016 - Sept 2017) from 85,000 to 110,000 with no formal target for Syrians stated.

Shortly after taking office, President Trump lowered the ceiling for fiscal year 2017 from 110,000 to 50,000 and put a ceiling of 45,000 for fiscal year 2018, 30,000 for fiscal year 2019, and 18,000 for fiscal year 2020, the lowest ceiling since the passage of the US Refugee Act in 1980. The ceiling has not yet been set for fiscal year 2021 and some administration officials have stated the ceiling should be zero. During fiscal year 2019 (Oct 2018-Sept 2019), the US resettled 30,000 refugees of which there were only 631 Syrian refugees due to the restrictions from the travel ban President Trump enacted in 2017.
It's not a game.

Welcome Syrian Refugees to Canada.

Welcome to Canada.

I love Syrian Kids.
The screening process may not be as easy as you think

The Screening Process

For Refugee Entry into the United States

1. Many Refugee Applicants Identify Themselves to the U.S. Refugee Agency, UNHCR, UNHCR, Then:
   - Collects identifying documents
   - Performs initial assessment
   - Collects biodata: name, address, birthday, place of birth, etc.
   - Collects biometrics: iris scans (for Syrians, and other refugee populations in the Middle East)
   - Interviews applicants to confirm refugee status and the need for resettlement
   - All information is checked again
   - Only applicants who are strong candidates for resettlement move forward (less than 1% of global refugees are accepted).

2. Applicants Are Received by a Federally Funded Resettlement Support Center (RSC):
   - Collects identifying documents
   - Creates an applicant file
   - Compiles information to conduct biographic security checks

3. Biographic Security Checks Start with Enhanced Interagency Security Checks:
   - U.S. security agencies screen the candidate, including:
     - National Counterterrorism Center/Intelligence Community
     - FBI
     - Department of Homeland Security
     - State Department
   - The screening looks for indicators like:
     - Information that the individual is a security risk
     - Connections to known bad actors
     - Outstanding warrants/immigration or criminal violations
   - DHS conducts an enhanced review of Syrian cases, which may be referred to USCIS Fraud Detection and National Security Directorate for review. Research that is used by the interviewing officer informs lines of question related to the applicant’s eligibility and credibility.
   - This process is repeated any time new information is provided, such as a previously used name or different phone number. Otherwise, the process continues.

4. Department of Homeland Security (DHS)/USCIS Interview:
   - Interviews are conducted by USCIS Officers specifically trained for interviews
   - Fingerprintss are collected and submitted (biometric check)
   - Re-interviews can be conducted if fingerprint results or new information raise questions. If new biographic information is identified by USCIS at an interview, additional security checks on the information are conducted. USCIS may place a case on hold to do additional research or investigation. Otherwise, the process continues.

5. Biometric Security Checks:
   - Applicant’s fingerprints are taken by U.S. government employees
   - Fingerprints are screened against the FBI’s biometric database
   - Fingerprints are screened against the DHS biometric database, containing watch-list information and previous immigration encounters in the U.S. and overseas
   - Fingerprints are screened against the U.S. Department of Defense biometric database, which includes fingerprint records captured in Iraq and other locations.

   If Not Already Noted, This is the End Point for Cases with Security Concerns. Otherwise, the process continues.

6. Medical Check:
   - The need for medical screening is determined
   - This is the end point for cases denied due to medical reasons.
   - Refugees may be provided medical treatment for communicable diseases such as tuberculosis.

7. Cultural Orientation and Assignment to Domestic Resettlement Locations:
   - Applicants complete cultural orientation classes.
   - An assessment is made by a U.S.-based non-governmental organization to determine the best resettlement location for the candidate(s). Considerations include:
     - Family: candidates with family in a certain area may be placed in that area.
     - Health: a candidate with asthma may be matched to certain regions.
     - A location is chosen.

   Recruitment Vetting:
   - Throughout this process, pending applications continue to be checked against terrorist databases to ensure an applicant is not a terrorist. If a match is found, the case is paused for further review.

   If There is Doubt about Whether an Applicant Poses a Security Risk, They Will Not be Admitted.

8. Travel:
   - International Organization for Migration books travel
   - Prior to entry in the United States, applicants are subject to:
     - Screening from the U.S. Customes and Border Protection’s National Targeting Center-Passport
     - The Transportation Security Administration’s Secure Flight Program

   This is the End Point for Some Applicants. Applicants who have no flags continue the process.

9. U.S. Arrival:
   - All refugees are required to apply for a green card within a year of their arrival to the United States, which triggers:
   - Another set of security procedures with the U.S. government.
   - Refugees are woven into the rich fabric of American society.
What are the UCC and Disciples doing?

We advocate for an end to the violence and a responsible U.S. role in ending the conflict and providing aid. We educate the public about what is going on in the region and what is needed. Through the Middle East Initiative of Global Ministries, webinars were held with our partners so they could tell us about their perspectives on the conflict and the situation of refugees in the region. We pray for an end to the violence and the opening of hearts to the plight of refugees.
